IT'S THE LAW.

Charles J. Chenu, chief of the division of motor vehicles, says that a great many operators of motor vehicles apparently don't know that Section 20 of the Motor Vehicle Act requires that proper signals be given by them before stopping, turning or changing the course of such vehicles, and if such vehicles are so constructed that the signals cannot be given by the use of the hand and arm so as to be visible, they must be equipped with an approved mechanical or electrical device adequate to give three distinct signals as required with the hand and arm. The use of a signal device that shows only the stop signal is in violation of the law and to permit the use of such a signal will lead to confusion in traffic and eventually a disregard of all signals by the motoring public.

Section 20 also provides that no person shall operate a motor vehicle so loaded or constructed as to obscure the driver's view to the rear, unless the vehicle is equipped with a mirror so located as to reflect to the operator a view of the highway for at least 200 feet to the rear of such vehicle.

A number of accidents and near accidents will be avoided if the motoring public will get a copy or synopsis of the motor vehicle act and study it until they know it, for there is no good reason to offer why a person who abuses the responsibility of operating a vehicle on the highway should not be familiar with the law covering such operation.

LOVE LETTERS CRIME

If you write love letters to a girl always date your letters. Otherwise they may serve a purpose that is inspired by anything but love. This is the moral gained from the experience of Julian Rolfe, played by William T. Carleton in "The Law and the Woman," a new Paramount picture, starring Betty Compton, coming to the Torrance Theatre on Sunday, May 28.

In this screen adaptation of Clyde Fitch's play Mr. Carleton plays the role of the husband, who is accused of the murder of his young ward, who has just been married to an unscrupulous woman with whom Rolfe has been infatuated some years before. The crowning blow in the evidence against the innocent man is a series of undated letters claimed by the woman to have been received from Rolfe just before the murder, thus pointing to jealousy as the motive for the alleged murder.

Betty Compton plays the role of the wife, who, after her husband's conviction, wrings from the other woman the secret of the real criminal. How she does this and the startling results constitute one of the cleverest and most interesting dramas in the history of the screen. The picture was directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws.

HOPE FARM NOTES

You have not asked me what I think is the most unfortunate element in modern society, so I think I will volunteer an opinion. It is the inability of most people to make any distinction between a difference of opinion and rebellion. Just think that over for a moment. I have seen the true cooperative spirit driven out of many families by this failure to show mental charity. It seems to be a law of nature that we cannot all think or act alike. It seems to me just about as foolish to fight that law as it would be to fight the law of gravity. Yet I see thousands of people trying to do it. Some members of the family or some neighbor may have an honest opinion on a subject which does not agree with yours. You may do one of two things—insist that he is absolutely wrong and that you are absolutely right, or let it go as a difference of opinion, which time will decide in your favor. All the way from the lonely farmhouse up to Washington, London or Paris this failure to separate honest difference from rebellion has done more to hold back true co-operation than anything else I know of. You cannot co-operate with a club or increase the spiritual life of men with a stick.

This idea crops out in most farm associations or movements to improve social conditions. Let any man stand up and present an unpopular idea and see what happens to him. It may be entirely fair criticism, or it may be a clear, strong vision of what is sure to come in the future. That does not seem to matter if the idea is unpopular or opposed to the interests or ideas of the men who happen to be in control. No matter how fair or how wise the critic may be, there will instantly be a cry of "Crucify him! He's a 'kicker'—a dangerous man!" The people in control of any organization or movement for new legislation are seldom, if ever, willing to discuss objections fairly. They rely upon their power over their followers to crush out opposition before it can gather strength. I could name a dozen cases right now where this policy is being carried out. It is effective for the present, but in the long run it will lead to revolution, for human thought is like the elements which combine to make a powerful explosive. You cannot destroy human thought, nor can you suppress it entirely. Fair and reasonable expression is the true safety valve. Choke it off by ridicule or force and you make it more powerful than dynamite. When it does explode it wrecks everything near it.
